

NO CHILD IS AN ISLAND

From Attachment Narratives Towards A Sense Of Belonging

Calling: Family & Child/Parent Counsellors, Workers in Foster Care & Residential Children's Homes

Growing up in multi-stressed families (violence, abuse, neglect), all kinds of problems get nestled in intimate relationships while care is under pressure.

This workshop aims to re(dis)cover and enhance a sense of relational agency between the child and carers, facilitating a sense of mattering and belonging.

Key Takeaways

- Acquire systemic and narrative framework and knowledge about attachment problems of children & adolescents in difficult relational contexts
- Understand systemic and narrative concepts 'a sense of agency', 'a sense of belonging' and 'a sense of coherence'
- Use playful, narrative methods & practices that can be helpful to these contexts
- Create teams of solidarity and care

Sabine has more than 30 years of experience engaging in several youth care projects and goes on therapeutic journeys with children, youngsters and families in context of trauma, violence and abuse. She leaves the beaten tracks in playful and creative ways when speaking becomes difficult.

Sharon's comments:

Sabine Vermeire is a highly experienced therapist and trainer in systemic and narrative ideas from Belgium. Her teaching is clear and accessible for all as she bridges theoretical frameworks and skills from systemic, narrative and dialogical approaches. In her clinical work, she maintains a respectful stance for young people and their families. She strongly believes in not forcing them to speak when they are not ready, especially about difficult circumstances that they had experienced. Instead, through her creative, inspiring co-research and playful ways of connecting with the young people, she is able to weave narratives of resilience and healing in their relationships and context.
