Course Synopsis

DDP is a therapeutic intervention model developed by Dr. Dan Hughes, Clinical Psychologist and celebrated author from Pennsylvania, U.S.A. Dan created DDP as a treatment for families with adopted or fostered children who had experienced early life trauma. It has now expanded to working with children and families in a variety of settings.

DDP is an evidence-based, attachment-based and family-based approach, focused on facilitating the child's readiness and ability to establish a secure attachment with their caregivers.

It integrates recent research in neurobiology of trauma, early child development and attachment theory to produce a therapeutic and parenting approach that assists professionals to understand and effectively support children with trauma-attachment problems and their families.

Who Should Attend

This course is for social workers, educators, therapists or anyone who works with children with developmental trauma and children that show attachment and relational difficulties.

Topics Explored

- Theory, research and links between attachment, the impact of trauma and interpersonal neurobiology
- Intersubjectivity theory
- PACE (Playfulness, Acceptance, Curiosity and Empathy)
- Affective-Reflective dialogue
- Making sense of behaviour and understanding shame, fear and rage
- Steps toward parent-child communication
- Assessing, engaging and working with parents and caregivers
- The importance of understanding and addressing Blocked Care
- Day-to-Day Parenting: a framework for parenting
- Application of DDP to different circumstances

Learning Objectives

DDP Level One training introduces the DDP model, the core components of DDP, and explores working with parents and caregivers and in different workplace environments.

Participants would also gain an understanding of the impact of secure attachment on aspects of development and how developmental trauma impedes normal development.

Please see ddpnetwork.org for more details of this model, its trainings and certification structure.
